-THE-BOSTON DAILY ADVERTISER

FOR 1882. The country has entered upon a season of industrial and business prosperty and comparative political repose. The adminis tration, in all its departments, has passed once more into Republican hands, and the people, persuaded that their material interests are safe under its progressive policy, are devoting themselves with rare energy to the pursuits of industry and commerce.

swered the summons.
"Pardon me," said the jeweler; "I feer I have made a mistake. Will you be so kind as to inform me who lives here?"

"Love thou thy neighbor," we are told, "Even as thyself." That creed I hold; But love her more, a thousand fold? My lovely neighbor; oft we meet In lonely lane, or crowded street; I know the music of her feet,

She little thinks how, on a day She must have missed her usual way, And walked into my heart for ayo, Or how the rustle of her dress Thrills thro' me like a soft caress, With trembles of deliciousness.

MY NEIGHBOR.

Wee woman, with her smiling mien, And soul celestially serenc, She passes me, unconscious queen.

Her face most innocently good, Where shyly peeps the sweet red blood; Her form a nest of womanhood! Like Raleigh—for her dainty tread, When ways are miry—I could spread My cleak, but there's my heart instead. Ah, neighbor, you will never know Why 'tis my step is quickered so . Nor what the prayer I murmur low

I see you 'mid your flowers at morn, Fresh as the resolud newly bern; I marvel, can you have a thorn?

If so, 'twere sweet to lean one's brenst Against it, and, the more it prest, Sing like the bird that grief bath blest. I hear you sing! And thro' me spring Doth musically ripple and ring! Little you think I'm listening!

You know not, dear, how dear you be; All dearer for the secrecy; Nothing, and yet a world to me. So near, too! You could hear me sigh, Or see my case with half an eye: But must not. There are reasons why.

-GRIALD MASSEY.

TWENTY years ago I was quite a young member of the profession to which I belong -a profession which is more characterized by romantic incidents and startling events than any other, and it was more on account of this fact than anything else that I joined it. My father, though not very wealthy, was a physician in comfortable circumstances, and, like most fathers, desired me to follow his profession. I, however, had a passion for a life of adventure, and the charms of such a life were only heightened by the possibility of danger; so at twenty I became a member of the secret police.

About the time I have mentioned above, all New York was in a fever of excitement over a shocking and mysterious murder recently committed. Henry Develan, a young man of high connections and irreproachable character, the son and partner of a wealthy merchant, was found dead on the payement of one of the principal streets. An examination showed but one wound, a with two blades, a cork-screw and a screwdriver. On the little piece of white metal in the centre of the handle, the initials J. B. were scratched with pin or needle. Put what seemed unaccountable ut the time, clasped tightly in the deceased's right hand was found a small gold ear-ring with a costly opal dependent therefrom. There was one peculiarity about the car-ring: engraved on the gold was a small anchor surrounded by delicate ornamental carving. Neither the knife nor the piece of jewelry could be identified, and every effort of the police force to obtain some clue to this daring murder was utterly fruitless, and by degrees the search began to be abandoned. I obtained possession of the knife and earing, and always carried them on my person—perhaps with the faint hope that I might be able to identify them accidentally. About six months after the murder of young Develan, when the affair was entirely forgotten by all except those interested in the deceased, I was called to Chicago on professional business. I was leisurely strolling down one of the most retired gressive policy, are devoting themselves with rare energy to the pursuits of industry and commerce.

The Daily Advertiser has never permitted itself to lose sight of these objects, even when dublic attention was strongly diverted in other directions, and during the coming year it will continue to bestow upon them them the most intelligent thought and the most highful consideration at its command. Philitical questions will also be treated, at the same time try to record excurring at home and abroad in government or society, in science, literature or art, as well as the social, moral and religious forces constantly at work in the transformation of modern life and thought.

The news of the day, local and general, will continue to be given with fullness and method; and all the departments for which the Daily Advertiser has a well-established reputation will be maintained and made better, if possible. Carefully prepared market terports, comprehensive ship news, and accurate accounts of everything passing in the world of finance, will be a part of the daily record.

curate accounts of everything passing in the world of finance, will be a part of the daily record.

During the session of Congress the Daily Advertiser will be represented at Washington by writers of recognized ability and large experience. Domestic and foreign correspondence, by residence rather than by travelers; dramatic and musical criticism by accomplished writers; reviews of current literature; and a resume of the news and gossip of the time, will give completeness and value to each issue of the paper.

The octave form adopted for the Daily Advertiser in July hast has proved advantageous in many ways, and moets with the contents are more uniformly distributed, and through the better arrangement present a more attractive appearance. It is the constant aim of all connected with the mechanical departments of the paper to perfect its typographical appearance, as it is of all concerned in the collection and preparation of matter for its columns, that it shall be timely, interesting, and worth everybody's reading.

The Weekly Advertiser, published on Friday mornings, is of the same size and form as the old man entered a handsome, aristoral when the old man entered a handsome, aristoration of the week, jeditorial articles of the widest general interest, miscellany, corring, and throwing down a gold piece in addition to the price demanded. "I perceive my mistake; but I was sat-mistress' coachman." "It is not the same. Pardon my intru-sion. Good day. And the jeweler, having obtained the required information, returned to his shop to communicate the same to

I gave him another piece of gold and returned to my hotel. Once in my room I carefully considered all the circumstances of the case and became convinced that I had found a clue to the mysterious murder of Henry Develan. It was but reasonable to suppose that the young lady whom I strongly suspected of being the murderess, should endeavor to get rid of the peculiar ear-rings in order to divert suspicion from herself to the innocent purchaser in possession it might be found. The fact of the concealment of the names of the parties from the jeweler was suspicious. and the coincidence of the initials on the knife with the name of the coachman was rather singular. Taking all things into consideration, I determined to act promptly. Attiring myself elegantly and concealing a revolver about my person, I proceeded to the mansion on M — street. I rang the bell and inquired for Miss Marie D'Alembort. "What name shall I give?" said the girl, eyeing me rather suspiciously.

I handed her a card bearing the name of prominent young lawyer in Chicago.

I was ushered into the parlor, and in a moment a young lady entered apparently about twenty years of age. She was strikingly beautiful, with great restless eyes black as midnight. On seeing me she started with surprise, and retreated toward the door. Before she could utter a word I adroitly stopped between her and the door. and fixing my eyes upon hers said:

"Madam, my name is Johnson; I am a member of the detective force of New York." Her cheek paled, and she seemed agitated. "Do you know this trinket?" I continued, displaying a glittering opal ear-

On so ing it she uttered a piercing scream and dropped senseless on the floor. The old coachman heard her cries and rushed into the room. He stopped when he saw me and demanded my business. I told him was a detective, and drawing the old knife rom my vest pocket I said sternly:
"James Baker, this is your knife, and vith it young Henry Develan was murdered

He uttered a low curse, and, his eyes blazing with fury, he drew a long bowie-knife and rushed toward me. I was pre-

"Not so fast," said I, and the six eyes of deep, fatal stab, penetrating the heart my revolver looked into his face. "An-Near him was found a large pocket knife other step toward me and you are a dead man. Drop that knife." He hesitated a moment and then, sec-

ing that I was in carnest, he dropped the knife and said, "I did not do it." I walked to the window, still covering him with my revolver, and sprang the watchman's rattle. It was answered by the entrance of two policeman. I ordered them to secure the man, and then turned my attention to the young lady, who was just recovering from her swoon. She was burning with fever and her eyes had an unmistakable look of delirium. The intense excitement and caused an attack of brain

From the coachman's confession and other circumstances the following facts leaked out: Some time previous to the tragedy Henry Develan had made a somewhat lengthy visit to Chicago, where he frequently met Miss D'Alembert. Being a man of elegant personal appearance and agreeable manners, the impulsive young lady became desperately enamored of him. but as he was engaged to an estimable young lady in New York, the passion was not reciprocated. She discovered the fact of his engagement, and with an inconsistency characteristic of her French blood, hated him more intensely than she had ever loved him. She determined to revenge nerself, and endeavored to bribe the old coachman to murder him. He would not agree to this, but in view of a reward he promised to help her. They took the evenng train for New York, and she knowing which way he would pass in going home from the house of his betrothed, they hid in an alley running across one of the principal streets. Baker had the knife open in his hand, but when about midnight they heard his steps, and she recognized him in the dim moonlight, the old man dropped the knife and recoiled. She seized it, and as he advanced rushed upon him and struck the fatal blow. The death-stricken man did not even utter a groan, but clenched wildly at the air, and his fingers closed upon one of her ear-rings, and in his fall tore it from her ear. They fled precipi-tately, and took the next train for Chicago. The young lady is still living, a raving maniae in the insane asylum, and the ancient coachman is serving a life term in the State prison.

DO NOT FRET.

"Men get out of order by excessive in-dustry, from steady watch, from care, and so render morbid the whole nervous system and for the time being will draw fear from the future. Too much is too much of anything. Some men are born hopeful: they go upon life exactly as a buoyant boat hoats upon the waves. It goes up when they go up, it falls when they full, but it is evermore on the surface. I have known men bankrupted and they came up next morning smiling. Then there are other men whose hope is at a minimum. The future is never radiant to them. One great fault is throwing into the future inflamed desires. It is not wrong for men to desire riches. Certainly it is not wrong to desire that which is the principal motive to industry. But if this is carried to an excess men become mean, detestable. There are multitudes of men that never think of enjoying thems lives while they are acquiring riches. They put it off to the future and they live in a perpetual anxiety and fret over the acquisition of property. Property is a very good thing, but it never had a value that justified a man in sacrificing his happiness or his soul for it. How many mon there are suffering care as to how their children should stand in life, how their family should stand, and if next year they shall be as prosperous as they are now? How many persons there are that brood and brood unnecessarily as to the future of their children. fearing that they may not turn out well. He has told a lie; he is on the road to the devil.' Well I don't believe there ever was a child that did not lie. It is part of their inherited nature, and it is an evil, and a great evil, and is to be plucked up by the roots. I, when I go into my garden, never cry and say: 'There are so many weeds! I am never going to have a garden, never, never, never!' I dig up the weeds and say, 'I will have a garden.' And so parents fearful of their children may take courage. Now as to the remedy for the evils that grow out of this care for the future-and irst we must put the direct resistance of the will. It makes a great difference whether a man takes a poker by the hot end or the cold end. There must be a vig orous determination that you are not called to joy; that all the universe is made for you, and that you will not submit yourself to the degradation and bondage of perpetual intrusive fear; that you will say, 'I will not permit myself to suffer.' The best way of escaping all these carping cares is to trust in the Lord. All things are for you." -Henry Ward Beecher.

HALLUCINATION.—It was recently remarked by Prof. Maudsley that one striking feature observed by medical men in cases of hallucination is that the patients cannot be convinced that the objects they see, the sounds they hear, and the smells they perceive, have no real existence, and that the sensations received are the result of an excited state of their nerves. Hallucination often extends to but one sense, the person affected being otherwise in a perfectly normal condition. It may arise either from an idea on which the mind has dwelt closely, or from excitement of the sensory nerves. It is said that Newton, Hunter, and some others of equal eminence. could, at will, picture forms to themselves until they appeared to be realities.

SCRAPS OF CHINESE WISDOM.

A WISE man can fill a thousand mouths, a fool cannot protect himself. One good word can warm three winters; one bad one stirs up anger. If you converse by the you about Clementine." way, remember there may be men in the grass. Let those who would drink look at a dranken man. The lion opens his mouth; the elephant (the emblem of wisdom) shuts his; shut yours. They are only horses and cows in clothes who neglect the study of the past and present. Every character must be chewed to get its juice. Foam on the waves is the fame of earth. The bright moon is not round for long; the brilliant cloud is easily scattered. The ancients saw not the modern moon; yet the modern moon shone on the ancients. The great wall of a myriad miles remains; the Chin Shih' Huangh (its builder) is gone. Heaven, earth and the spirits love the humble, not the proud; to the humble they give happiness; to the proud, calamity. Man cannot become perfect in a hundred years; he can become corrupt in less than a day. Men who never violate their consciences are not startled by a knock at the door at midnight. Each half of a riven bamboo smokes. (This is said against quarrelling.) Better be upright and want, than wicked and have superabundance. To save one life is better than to build a seven-storied pagoda. Do not consider any virtue trivial, and so neglect it. - Chamber's Journal.

RATS.

Arthur Young stated a century ago that the whole human race could live upon rabbits, if other food failed, and it is impossible to believe that the Creator endowed the little quadruped with such powers of reproduction, and of thriving in spots where no other animal of the same kind can live, were it not intended that his flesh and fur should be largely utilized by man. Sir William Harcourt will not, we anticipate, be guilty of robbing the poor man of one of his cheapest and most esteemed-staples of food, and, moreover, we may be certain that if the supply of home-bred rabbits should fall off and decline in England, there will be no want of alacrity among foreigners to compensate us for the deficiency in their native stock. The rabbit originally made his way from the sandy deserts of Africa into Spain, and like other invaders, he has overflowed the Continent of Europe. The rat goes whereever man precedes him and may be found in the Arctic regions no less than amidst tropical heats. He accompanied every expedition to the North Pole, which lias hitherto been undertaken, and Dr. Kane tells us that the rats ran about us ship like tame dogs, and took shelter in his fur gloves at night. It is not generally known that legiops of rats were included among the discomforts which Nepoleon the Great had to endure as a prisoner in St. Helena, and in Barry O'Meara's "Memoirs' it is recorded that the rats swarm at Longwood in almost an increditable number. I have frequently seen them assemble like broods of chickens ground the offal thrown from the kitchen. The floors and wooden partitions that separated the rooms were perforated with holes in every direction. Upon one occasion, when the Emperor rose from the table, a large rat sprang out of | Napoleon's hat as he lifted it from the side. | mastiffs, and then drive down the street at board. But the rabbit swarms and thrives in places rarely or never trodden by man, There are uninhabited islands in the South Seas where he abounds, and visitors to the Scilly group, lying forty miles away from Land's End, can testify to his presence in countless numbers upon barren little islands, of which he is an almost solitary denizen.

" OPENING OF A CHESTNUT BURR,"

"Any chestnuts 'round here ?" asked one of the three city boys who met an aged benevolent-looking farmer out in Livonia Township. The old man hesitated: You don't want to steal 'em?" he asked.

"Oh, no, we just want to find out." "Well, there's a few trees back there. but if I thought you wanted to steal them I wouldn't have told you, for the owner's gone to town; but you're bright, honestlooking boys." The boys blushed with the pride of conscious goodness.

"When will the owner be back?"

"Well, not before dark, I reckon."
The boys respectfully thanked the old man, waited till he got out of sight, jumped the fence, and were soon shaking down the burrs.

The shaking was easy, but the opening of the chestnut burrs was more difficult and unpleasant. At last the boys had a splendid pile of haudsome, brown nuts on the ground, and they prepared to put them in the bags they brought with them.
"Please don't take any more trouble," said the benevolent old man who stood by the rence beaming kindly on the startled boys. "I'm not so strong as I once was, and I fear I can't hold in this dog much longer. If you'll hurry, though, I guess I can keep him here till you get to the railroad track. Down, Tige, sir!" As the boys looked back from the railroad fence, they could see the stooping figure of the old man scooping the rich, brown chestnuts into a two-bushel bag.—Det. Free

A FAMOUS PARIS WIT.

THE famous Romieu was one day caught in a shower, and forced to seek refuge in a docrway of the opera-house. It was six o'clock already, and he held an engagement at the Cafe de Paris for that very hour. The rain fell in torrents.

There was no carriage to be had. He had no umbrella. What was to be done. While he was cursing his bad luck, a gentleman with a large umbrella passed by. Romieu was seized with a sudden inspiration. He rushed out and grasped the stranger by the arm, and gravely installed himself under the protecting umbrella. "I am everjoyed to see you," he immediately began. "I have been looking for you for two weeks. I wanted to tell

Without giving the stranger time to express his surprise, Romieu rattled away with gossip and anecdote until he had led the unknown companion to the door of the Café de Paris.

Then he glanged at him with a face full of well-feigned ratonishment:
"Pardon, monsieur," he cried, "it seems I am mistaken." "I believe so," said the stranger.

"The devil!" added Romien, "be discreet; don't repeat what I have told you."

"I promise you." "A thousand pardons."

Romieu hastened within the café and tells the adventure to his friends amid great laughter. Suddenly one of them says:

"Your cravat is rumpled." Romieu puts his hand to his neck and turns pale. His pin, a valuable sapphire, is gone. A further examination—and his purse and watch were gone. The man with the umbrella was a pick-

The friends laugh again, but Romieu doesn't join them.

SOME ODDITIES OF GERMAN LIFE.

In no other company than Germany could the accomplishments of veteran ballplayers be so well utilized. Instead of carrying up bricks in the hod they are generally thrown up. One man stands at the pile in the street, and one man is placed on each staging to throw to the man above through a hole in the scaffolding. By this succession of relays bricks are thrown up five stories. I have never seen a "muff" made, but I usually watched the game from the other side of the street. Another custom connected with house-building is for the owner to give an entertainment to the workmen when the side walls are up. The fact is advertised to the community by a great crown of flowers placed on the top of the building, with numerous flags and decorations. Work is suspended for the day, and the workmen meet the owner and invited guests around the festive board and afterward dance with their wives and daughters.

The Germans are fond of water, but they prefer to take it on the outside. Wherever there is water enough they have free baths; and swimming schools abound. free baths; and swiming schools bound. In Vienna an exterprising man has estab-lished a bath-house exclusively for dogs, which, after being thoroughly washed in large tolon, are placed in eages to dry. Dogs of all sizes and breeds and of every social position are admitted and charged only with reference to their size. No one appreciates the spirit of the phrase "to work like a dog "until he has been in Germany, The Arickaree Indians call a horse "a big dog." In Germany a dog might well be called a little horse. About horse 'a big dog." In Germany a dog professor's friends. "Yes, yes," roplies the learned man dejectedly. "But I fail to see in him the least leaning toward the and women; and they are frequently hitched up together. It is not uncommon to see a dog drag ten or twelve hundred weight. I have seen a man and a woman yet into a jarge cart drawn by two large a rate of which John might have been proud. A good dog for this purpose costs from twelve to sixteen dollars. They sometimes lead a very miserable life; yet I have noticed many instances of cordial affection between master and servant. A dog team has one advantage over a horse team: it guards the property as well as drags it. In winter they are often allowed when resting or waiting to jump into the cart and cuddle down in the straw. In Vienna there is an immense hospital and veterinary college where horses, dogs and cats, and all quadrupeds are recieved. Farriers or boss blacksmiths are required to spend six months at this institution and to receive a certificate of graduation before setting up in business for themselves.

With all its inconveniences, contradictions, and disadvantages, German life is not without rich compensation. If the Germans have fewer material conveniences than we, they manage to enjoy themselves more, with a great deal less. Fine music and drama at cheap prices, the love of outdoor life and the multitude of holidays which allow him to gratify it, a passionate fondness for singing, and abundance of beer, cheap wine and cigars, will atone in the German mind for a great many other deficiencies. As to books, there is no country where they are cheaper or more abundant. Ten thousand new titles are printed every year. In Prussia, compulsory education secures a good average culture. The new Empire is far ahead of us, not only in the organization of its army, but in the organization of its civil service and the conditions of tenure of office. Its schools are in many respects superior to ours. We have borrowed its kindergartens, and might borrow with advantage some features of its university life. We have adopted its postal cards. The money-order system as there administered is far more convenient than ours. You are never troubled to call at the post-office; the money is brought to your door. But above all things, who can compute our immense debt to German learning? To mention nothing else in the reckoning, is it not remarkable that our best Shakesperian dictionary and our best English grammar should be the work of Germans? But this time the oddity is ours, and the laugh is on the Teutonio check. As to music and art, we must stand in silence with our hats off. Finally, with all its sauerkraut, sausage, and beer, there is a charm about German home-life which cannot be ignored. There is a sweetness of affection in the family circle, a fidelity to friends, a stability of character, and a homely ingenuousness which tho most obstinate prejudice can hardly resist. It is a life which is easily open to inspection, which seldom charms on the surface. but which grows better as you go down. If we have criticised the freekles on the German countenance, we have found no radical defect in the German blood. And in spite of its odds and ends, its faults and incongruities, no teachable, unprojudiced American can spend even a short time in Germany without enriching his friendship as well as his mind, and without learning that there remains much to be done for his own country.

OUR DRESS.

How did we come to possess our present form of dress? This is one of the many questions answered by a reviewer in the Nature, who had under his notice the catalogue of the General Pitt Rivers Anthropological Collection. Clothing at first was almost entirely ornamental. The exceptions were such articles as belts, from which instruments of various kinds could be suspended, so as to be ready for use while the hands were left free. A savage does not enjoy the luxury of a pocket. Even at the present day a Japanese has to sling his tobacco, pipe and pouch from his belt, and the only pockets he has are in his sleeves. The simple cincture was the germ, so to speak, of the clothing we wear. When the arts became so far advanced that man could make paper cloth or some woven material, these latter were substituted for the primi-tive fringe, and the kilt was thus developed. Curiously enough, the dress of the Scottish Highlanders embodies these two stages of progress in the kilt and the sporran. As man advanced there were inconveniences attending the use of the kilt, which were abated by fastening that garment at one point between the legs, and the human mind was then fairly set upon the path to arrive at the attainment of a pair of trousers. When the back and shoulders needed protection, the savage used the skin of some animal, and it is from this sort of covering for the upper part of the body that we have derived our coats, yests, shirts, etc. But the ancient cloak form is even yet retained, not only by such people as Zulu chiefs, but in all robes of ceremony by dignitaries of court and college of the most highly civilized nations on the face of the earth. The elaborate and varied head coverings of the present day all sprang from a very simple, original type.

HOW TO CURE A COLD

A Medical Journal fells how one man A Medical Journal tells how one many was cured of a cold: "He bolled a little wormwood and thorehound together and drank freely of the tea before going to bed. The lack day he took five pills, put one kind of plaster on his breast, another under his arm and still another on his back. Under advice from an experienced old lady. e took all these off with an oyster knile in the afternoon, and slapped on a mustare the same time with a bundle of sweet fern, which she made into tea and gave him every half hour until noon, when he took a perience in doctoring, in High street, "gave him two pills of her own make, about the two tenspoonfulls of home made balsam to keep them down. Then he took a half pint of hot rum, at the suggestion of autoid sea captain who was visiting in the next house, and stenmed his legs with an alcohol bath. At this crisis two of his neighbors arrived, who saw at once that his blood was out of order, and gave him half a gallon of spearmint ten and a big dose of custor oil. Bufore going to bed he took eight of a new kind of pills, wrapped about his neck a flannel soaked in hot vinegar and sait, and had feathers burned on a shovel in his room. Hu is now cured and full of gratitude."

Taxation.—The bill introduced in the Mussachusetts Legislature by Senutor Hastings of Worcester, contemplates a radical change in the present tax laws. It avoids the wrong of double taxation whether in the shape of mortgaged property, or upon bonds, stocks and other securliles owned by the tax-payer, or held for his beneat, and exempt from taxation under the present law, or not taxable directly to him. It has detailed provision for the return of taxable property to the Assessors, and prescribes a rigid onth of honesty; the pounity or neglect to make a return, or a deficient or false return, is a valuation of the property by appraisers and the imposition of a tax of twice the sum which would otherwise have been levied

FACTS STRONGER THAN FICTION. A WONDERFUL CASE.

The following letter from Mrs. Wardwell wife of E. N. Wardwell, Esq., well known from his long proprietorship of the Ocean House, Swampscott, will be read with interest:

To the Editor of the Boston Herald:—Since the appearance of an item in the Herald referring to my recovery from consumption, I am receiving so many letters of inquiry that it is too much of a tax upon my time for me to reply to them all, and you will do me and the slok a favor by publishing my statement in full.

Four years ago I was prostrated with lung fover, from which I slowly recovered. I had frequent attacks of pleurisy, constant night froquent attacks of pleurisy, constant night sweats, and my stomach was so disordered from dyspepsia that everything I ate distressed me. I coughed almost constantly. I have employed the best physicians, to whom I have paid over a thousand dollars. They all pronounced my lungs to be diseased and advised my removal South as my only hope—but since using Faith Whiteomb's Balsam' I have entirely recovered from night sweats. I have no pleurisy. My cough is almost gone—in fact I feel like a new person. I have gained twenty-live pounds, and, thanks to this Shaker medicine and a directing Providence, I feel comparatively well. The Balsam has cured my dyspepsia, so that I can eat anything I wish, and it does not distress me.

Inst Summer I was obliged to give up my work on account of a severe cough. I consulted a physician; who said my lung were diseased, and in such a way as would lead to quick Consumption. He doctored me, but to no effect. I consulted other physicians, who gave the same wordlet. Finally a friend told me to try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam but I had tried so many remedies without gaining help that I had but little faith in that; but after only a short trial I have gained in desh, my cough is better, and I rost better.

WHAT THE DRUGGISTS SAY

Lynn, March 26th, 1881.

"Faith Whitcomb's Cough Balsam gives the best satisfaction of any cough remedy I ever sold." Yours truly, IRA P. JEFTS, Druggist.

CURE OF BRONCHITIS.

"For six weeks I had the Bronchitis and could not speak. My physician could give me no relief and I feared there was no earthly help for me; but hearing of Faith Whitcomb's Ralsam, I pocured a bottle, and to my groat delight was relieved after the first few dosos, and entirely cured by continuing its use."

EVERY MEDIUM A FRAUD.

REV. GEORGE WASHBURN, D.D., president of Robert College, Constantinople, under date of Boston November 9, 1880, writes as follows to the Independent:

The following notice appeared yesterday in the Boston papers, and not less than 3,000 persons met last night in Tremont l'emple, to witness this test performance. The results ought to be known everywhere. The Rev. Arthur A. Waite has assorted in his recent lectures in Music Hall that Honest Spiritualists are mistaken, and that all mediums are most certainly frauds;" which challenge Col. Francis King publicly accepted, and will produce one of the best mediums in the world, to give tests so convincing that no one can deny the truth of Spiritualism. Rev. Mr. Waite will meet the "unknown" medium next Monday night, November 8th, at Tremont Temple, and then and there prove his assertion by reproducing at the same instant the same results, under the same conditions, or publicly acknowledge his failure.

"The Rev. A. A. Waite is a Methodist minister in Boston, who was formerly a medium, and was also for a time with the Davenport Brothers. Some years ago he was converted and became a preacher. He went where he was not known, and his best friends had no suspicion of his former experience. But when the Rev. Joseph Cook was entrapped into a quasi recognition of the genuineness of spiritualistic miracles, Mr. Waite privately performed all these marvels for the benefit of his clerical associates, to satisfy them that Mr. Cook had been deceived and that every so-called medium was a fraud. They very wisely urged him to give public demonstrations of this important fact, and do what he could to save the souls of deluded Spiritualists, and put an end to the spread of this fatal error, which had, for a mo-ment, at least, disturbed the good sense of so clear-headed a man as Mr. Cook. He reluctantly consented, and has been lectur-ing on Spiritualism in Boston. At his last lecture he was challenged, as appears in the advertisement, by a well-known Spiritualist. He had the confidence to accept without any knowledge of what the tests were to be until he appeared on the plat-form. I had the pleasure of meeting him during the day, and suggested to him that allowing that the spirits had nothing to do with these manifestations, he might still meet some trick which was new to him. But he seemed to have the fullest faith that God would not suffer him to fail. I must confess that I went in the evening with some misgivings on this point. The result fully justified his faith. The 'medium' claimed to be acted upon by 'Samoset,' and performed his tricks with marvellous success; but the spirit of the old Indian was no match for the live Yankee. Whatever the medium did in his cabinet, Mr. Waite did on the open stage, before the audience, with still greater skill and success. The medium finally disappeared suddenly from the stage, and the mixed committee, as well as Col. King himself, acknowledged that Mr. Waite had done everything that the medium had done. Col. King said that he could only explain it on the ground that Mr. Waite was himself a medium: rather a flimsy pretense, considering the fact that Mr. Waite had not only performed these tricks on the open stage, but had explained how they were done. All the most surprising 'spiritual manifestations' were exhibited, besides some very rare ones. Two illustra-tions will suffice. The medium was in his cabinet, with a lady and gentleman from the audience, 'the two being needed to develop magnetic power.' These two had their hands on the head and shoulders of the medium, whose hands were on the shoulder of the gentleman. They testified that he did not move, but spirit hands stroked their faces, voices were heard, in-struments played, the gentleman received severe blows over the head, and distinctly saw a spirit face looking down on him. Mr., Waite then performed exactly the same trick in his cabinet, with the same gentleman and lady, and just the same re-sults. He afterward showed on the open stage that all was done with one of his

"The last test was a severe one, which was suggested by the committee and long objected to by the 'medium.' The committee bound his thumbs together with small cord and sealed the knot with wax. He went into his cabinet, and after some delay the usual manifestations were heard and hands were seen outside the cloth. The cabinet was opened and the seal was found unbroken. Mr. Waite at once repeated the trick on the open stage, with equal success, and showed that it was done by a peculiar formation of the bones of the thumb, which made it impossible to tie them. He then gave his thumbs to the 'medium' and his aid, who exerted his whole strength in tying them. At the moment when the greatest strain was on them, he instantly withdrew one hand and presented it free to the medium. At this point the enthusiasm of the audience rose to such a point that they sprang to their feet, cheered, waved their handkerchiefs, threw up their hats, and went fairly wild. During this prolonged applause the 'medium' and his aid disappeared. When quiet was restored, Mr. Waite made a few very appropriate remarks, and closed with a short but touching prayer for those who had been led by the loss of loved ones to lond a willing ear to the false claims of deceivers, who pretended to communicate with the dead. "It seemed to me that the Rev. Mr.

hands, and proved by experiment with a blindfolded gentleman, a Spiritualist, that it was impossible for persons placed as the witnesses had been to detect this movement

Waite deserved the thanks of all lovers of truth, and that I had never listened to a more profitable sermon. I have studied this subject for years in books, with increasing interest, and have often been sorely puzzled by things which I could not explain. I learned more last night in two hours than all I knew before on this subject. There are, no doubt, mystories in the realm of mind and in the spiritual world which we cannot explain and which will never be explained by science; but it is a great gain to science and philosophy, as well as to people generally, to be able to say that every 'medium' is a fraud. Maskelyne and Cook in London have devoted them. and Cook, in London, have devoted them-selves to the demonstration of this fact, and no one should visit London without visiting their hall; but the test which was applied last was more comprehensive and satisfactory than anything I have seen in London. The Methodist Church could not do better than to appoint the Rev. Mr. Waite as an itinerant preacher for the whole country, with the mission of proying the truth of his assertion that 'every "medium" is a fraud."
